

How the Narwhal got his Tooth

The narwhal, Noggin, and Polar Bear were playing in the ocean. Polar Bear was chasing Noggin, and Noggin was diving in and out of the water. He went too high and his tooth got stuck in an iceberg.

Polar bear pulled and pulled and finally got Noggin out. As he pulled, Noggin's tooth stretched and stretched longer and longer until it cracked to a sharp point.

Noggin had a terrible toothache and so Polar Bear took him to see Beluga who filled the tooth.

All the other Narwhals saw Noggin's tooth and wanted one too. Beluga said he would only give the males a long tooth because it would be too dangerous for the females who were nuzzling their babies.

From then on, all male narwhals grew a long tooth.
